(a) Avoiding an exchange which would free Black's position.

(b) Black hopes to open the two diagonals leading to White's KR2 and KN2 for his bishops.

(c) Entering a decisive combination. Black thought his next move would be a sufficient reply to the threat of 13 BxP PxP 14 NxP and 15 NxBch. More prudent was 12...B-K2 or 12...B-N5, but then White looks better.

(d) Black overlooked this possibility. If now 14...NxP 15 RxQP or 14...PxP 15 NxP Q-N1 16 R-N6, and White will win.

(e) Unfortunately for Black, White wins after 15...QxRch 16 QxQ PxP 17 QxN or 16...NxP 17 QxPch.

(f) The point. White wins two pieces for a rook.

(g) Simplest.

(h) Forced.

(i) Black holds out longer with 26...R-R1. Now he loses the exchange and the game.
